Mandarin 10月02/03号

This was a tidying-up loose ends sort of lesson. We reviewed the reading passage about square dancing and went over the reading paper, trying to understand more of it and to answer questions.

Note: more and more you are coming across 'completing verbs'. This is a way that Mandarin can add a lot of subtlety or mood to basic structures.

You've met a few of them. There's no need to go into detail at this stage about exactly how you use them. The main thing is to be aware of them and of roughly the sort of job that the completing verb is doing do.

着

- Notice how much the character 着 is used in the passage.
- It is rarely crucial to the basic meaning it just changes the emphasis of something putting the emphasis on the duration of an activity
- It's often a little bit like using and '-ing' form in English: eg 'putting on music' rather than 'put on music' 'dancing' rather than 'dance'.
